ACTIVE PRINCIPLES

HYALURONIC is a natural component of the dermis, it has the crucial role to bind water and give it volume and tone to the skin. However, its concentration tends to decrease with age; This constant and considerable decrease is among the main causes of skin aging. The technology of the microspheres is based on the use of a hygroscopic material that forms a sphere that is dehydrated. Contained in the dehydrated microspheres, hyaluronic acid penetrates along with other components in the skin and attracts water to the surface layer of the skin. Its characteristic is that of acting as a molecular sponge and allow the spheres to expand and apply pressure to the surface giving a filling effect and plumping the skin contours.

PEPTIDES are synthesized substances, that are constructed entirely in the laboratory and are molecules formed by the union of two or more amino acids. L'ACETYL HEXAPEPTIDE- 30 is a hexapeptide of six amino acids to action "botox-like" that mimics the botulinum toxin type A. It is the ultimate anti-aging in cosmetics that reduces the appearance of expression lines. It has an effectiveness of micro relaxant Botox-like which reduces small wrinkle expressions, it acts at the level of contraction of mimic muscles. Mimics the botulinum toxin in a safe and reversible way: in vitro tests have shown that it inhibits the transport of neurotransmitters that induce muscle contraction, reducing it by 30%. With the introduction of the peptides it changed the very nature of the cosmetic. The new anti-wrinkle functional substances are studied with methods typical of esthetic medicine as if these tests were real beauty therapies for rejuvenation. In fact, the availability of these types of substances (peptides), in their various types, allows us to solve today many aesthetic problems which results in a decreased efficiency of the apparatus cutaneous, or because of age or biological for spent pathologies or traumas, with results that were unthinkable a few years ago.
